Letter from the Director

Seven Goals, Much Progress

June 30 marks the end of the first year of the Marlborough Public Library's Long Range Plan that runs through 2017. A copy is available at www.marlboroughpubliclibrary.org. This plan was developed with community input gathered through planning committee meetings and a community survey. All this feedback went into writing the following seven goals. We have made progress on many this first year.

* The City of Marlborough will have a public library facility that meets the needs of the community. The renovation

Margaret Cardello,
Library Director

of the Children's space celebrated on May 4, 2013 and additional painting and carpeting on the lower level helped us achieve a major part of this goal.

* The Marlborough Public Library will respond effectively to changes in local education. Both our Children's and Teen Departments have been working with the schools to help get the word out about library programs and services that reinforce classroom learning. MPL supports school and home early literacy efforts and seeks to keep children connected to library services throughout their teen years.

* Residents will view the Marlborough Public Library as a primary source of local information. One of our year 2 efforts will be to design a new website that will serve as a communication platform for information about library programs and services, and about resources throughout the City of Marlborough.

* The Marlborough Public Library will provide collections and services to meet the diverse needs of Marlborough Public Library recently held its Second Annual Teen Writing Competition. Teens from Marlborough or those attending a school in Marlborough were encouraged to send in their stories, essays and poetry for a chance to win the grand prize of $100. On Thursday, May 30th, the winners were announced at the writers' reception where they had the opportunity to read a portion of their work to the audience. First place winners are published on pages 8 and 9. To read all winners, visit our website.

Groundbreaking Reads

It's that time of the year! Summer is here and it is time for Summer Reading once again. But why should the kids have all of the fun? You read year-round without recognition, so why not get rewarded for it this summer? By registering for our Adult Summer Reading Program, you will automatically be entered in our grand prize drawing for a Samsung Galaxy Tab 2 7" Tablet! By keeping track of how much you read either by hours or pages, you can be entered for prize drawings for a $25 gift card of your choice every 2 weeks! Just read a minimum of 210 pages (15 pages a day) or 5 hours (just over 21 minutes a day) over each two week period for your chance to win, but for every additional 100 pages or 2 hours you will receive an extra entry. Register at <http://tinyurl.com/keh5v8y> to track your reading online or visit the circulation desk to sign up and receive a packet of bookmarks you can use to log your progress.

The theme for this year's Adult Summer Reading Program is "Groundbreaking Reads," so dig into a good book about archaeology, geology, gardening, or even the underworld! In July, the Book Club will be reading Terminal Freeze by Lincoln Child, an archaeological thriller set in the Alaskan Federal Wilderness Zone. Other recommendations for earthshaking books can be found at the circulation desk, and don't forget to attend our Summer Reading Reception on Wednesday, August 24 to share your own recommendations for "Groundbreaking Reads!"

Summer Trivia Nights

As part of the Adult Summer Reading Program the library will be hosting two trivia nights to test your knowledge on some literary and "groundbreaking" topics. This is a team event with teams of 4 people, so bring your own or make new friends! Refreshments and a prize for the winning team will be provided!

Join us in the Bigelow Auditorium on Mon., July 8th and Mon., Aug. 5th from 6-8pm.

Book Planter Craft

Join us on Wed., Aug. 14 from 6-8pm in the Bigelow Auditorium for our Adult Summer Craft: Re-purposed Book Planters.

Turn old hardcover books into creative and inspiring planters. All supplies, including the hardcover book, potting soil, and plants will be provided, along with refreshments. Space is limited, so please register through our event calendar by visiting <http://bit.ly/MarlboroughLibraryEvents>

Join our Book Club!

Visit the circulation desk for a copy of the book.

Dig Into Reading

Images are copyrighted. Contact the CSLP at 1-866-657-8556 or info@cslpreads.org for more information.

This year's Summer Reading theme is "Dig Into Reading!" Each week, activities will delve into a different underground topic, from dinosaur bones and mummies to construction vehicles and buried treasure. In addition to weekly story times and crafts, Children's Room staff will offer drop-in movies, an Alice in Wonderland Party, and hands-on programs on pottery, gardening, and more. (see descriptions below and calendars on pages 10 to 12).

Several special guests will join us to share their underground expertise. Come check out more than 100 real fossils and learn about the prehistoric past with Paulette Morin at "Having Fun with Fossils and Dinosaurs" on July 22nd from 3pm to 4pm. This program is recommended for children in preschool through 5th grade.

On August 6th from 2pm to 3:15pm, meet eight live animals at "Amazing Animals: Diggers and Burrowers." Critters 'n' Creatures of NH will introduce you to the animals and share fascinating facts about their underground homes and habits.

For more information, visit www.marlbroughpubliclibrary.org. Many of our programs are drop-in; for those that require registration, you can sign up online, in person, or over the phone at 508-624-6902.

New "Who Was...?" Biographies!

Take a look at the New Nonfiction shelves to find lots of new books from the very popular "Who Was...?" series! These are just a few of our many new biographies:

Who Was Jackie Robinson?

An inspiring biography of the acclaimed athlete who, in 1947, became the first African American major league baseball player. (NEW! J 921 ROBINSON, JACKIE)

Who Was Queen Elizabeth?

Presents the life of Queen Elizabeth I, from her birth in 1533 to her reign as queen, which brought peace and prosperity to sixteenth-century England. (NEW! J 921 ELIZABETH I)

Who Was Claude Monet?

Highlights the life and work of the nineteenth-century French

Impressionist painter. (NEW! J 921 MONET, CLAUDE)

Who Was Anne Frank?

Looks closely at Anne Frank's life before the secret annex, what life was like in hiding from the Nazis, and the legacy of her diary. (NEW! J 921 FRANK, ANNE)

Marlborough residents, especially children, teens, the ESL community and senior citizens. Staff has been weeding our collections to get rid of items that are no longer of interest and to make space for new titles. The new Children's space has resulted in new programming efforts. Children's staff has reached out to the PTO to tell them about our programs and services. Our Home Delivery service is growing in popularity. We hope to get even more participants and volunteers involved in the program. A Conversation Circle grant will help us update our English language learning collection and subscribe to Mango, a database that will provide online support to ESL patrons and others who would like to learn a new language.

 The Marlborough Public Library will seek partnership opportunities with businesses, schools, and community organizations to strengthen library services to the community. The Library will seek ways to work with a variety of groups to talk about how the Library can support their initiatives and how they can support our plans for developing library services that meet community needs.

 The Marlborough Public Library will use technology to facilitate access to information. FY13 City funds enabled us to update all of our public computers. This provides us with a good platform for growth.

Check Out Our New Adult Graphic Novel Section!

For all of you graphic novel fans out there, you'll be happy to know that we've decided to give this genre its own section, just like in Young Adult and in Children's. They are now located at the end of the DVD section. You'll find some old comic favorites like Dilbert and Doonesbury, as well as newer series like Walking Dead and Locke & Key. New graphic novels will be interfiled within the collection. Be sure to check out our display stand, too, with featured books from our growing collection throughout the month of June.

Graphic novels have an unfortunate stigma associated with them; most people who aren't familiar with the genre think they're "just for kids". This couldn't be farther from the truth! There are graphic novels for all ages. The new section is intended for adults ages 18+. For those with little reading time on their hands, graphic novels are great because you can finish one in a couple of hours. They're perfect for 15 minutes before bed reading! There's something for everyone with a variety of genres for every taste from horror to mystery, humor to memoir. Art styles vary just as dramatically, from black and white to full color and everything in between.

Staff member Laura Faunce has taken the initiative to develop this area. If you have any recommendations or requests, please email her at lfauce@cwmar.org. She is happy to work with our graphic novel reading patrons!

Library Budget and Trust Funds

The Library's primary source of funding is through the City of Marlborough's municipal budget. The library also receives an annual grant from the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners for meeting the criteria set for certified libraries.

Trust funds make up the third source of library funding. Over the years people have left money to the library as part of their estate. Many familiar Marlborough names such as Bigelow, Witherbee, Brigham and others remembered the library in their wills. Some place restrictions on the money, such as it can only be used to buy materials or it has to be used to buy poetry books. Others allow funds to be spent on anything the library needs.

In more recent years, people have continued this tradition and left funds to the Library to support library programs, such as museum passes.

If you would like to talk about including the library in your estate planning, please contact Library Director, Margaret Cardello.

The Unheard Voice

by Innia Macasieb

The whispering wind calls my name
I whisper back again and again
The message I tell him is always the same
But he doesn't hear me

Listen to the songs of the beasts and the birds
That can be heard from the ends of the earth
My actions may speak louder than my words
But no one else can hear me

And as the sky turns dark and dim
We all make our way back to our kin
Saying nothing for too long is a sin
But I have to, for no one will hear me

Crowds may gather at the center of town
Their hollers and laughter are shaking the ground
I raise my voice with them, loud and proud
And yet no one can hear me

Sadly, even my family and friends
Can't understand the messages I send
They don't know about the heart that needs to mend
I speak, but they can't hear me

So if you find yourself in the realm of night
If the world deserts you, and you have nowhere to hide
And if you open your heart and clear your mind
Only then will you be able to hear me

MPL Writing Winners

The Judges had different backgrounds in writing and teen literature. MPL is so grateful that they volunteered their time to judge this competition. Many thanks go to Julie Berry (author of YA books including All The Truth That's In Me coming out in September), Jenny O'Connell (YA author of The Book of Luke and currently working on its sequel), Sam Paradise (published fiction writer and finalist in the 2012 World's Best Short-Short Story Contest), Jeff Adair (editor of the Sudbury Town Crier, managing editor of the Community Newspaper Company, and an award winning journalist), Sarah Sapienza (co-founder for Worcester's Poets' Asylum), and Diane McKamy (high school librarian and avid teen literature reader).

Sunset

By Siobhan Gannon

The sun rises and the sun sets. The old man squints into its radiant rays and breathes in the humid air. He gradually stands up and stretches his stiff, aching muscles. The whispering winds blow through the air and cool off the strange man. The man reaches for a slender stick he uses as a cane and begins his journey through the hazardous city he once called home. The deserted streets echo with the thud of the walking stick against the solid road ... a thud that would never be heard, since the man had lost his hearing during his time of isolation.

He trudges down the center of the road, exhausted from years of traveling. Alas, this is the final day of his painstaking trek. The final day that life exists on Earth, for death is a sly trickster that creeps up on this wise man. He sighs with relief as a grand tower appears in his sights. He scurries towards the building and, shoving through mounds of dirt and trash, reaches for the rusty handle.

With a creak, the eerie door pushes open and the man trudges inside. He slams the door shut and bolts the locks on as tight as this lone soldier holds onto life. Paranoid thoughts of other survivors push into his mind, but he ignores them with the realization there was no one. A rough cough chokes the man along with the gaseous fumes lurking in the room. He retires to a wooden chair that Fate placed into the room.

The sun rises and the sun sets, but unfortunately, this man has risen for a final time. He collapses into the chair and just as his eyes close, there is a knock at the door.

Salt Water Promises

by Isabella Lopez

Harsh rock threatened to scrape my hands,
While wild flowers bloomed.
The climb whispered of greater things,
The air, with hope, perfumed.

The wind danced sweetly through our hair;
Children squealed below.
Troubles were pebbles in the sand,
Thoughtless of tomorrow.

We sat as queens on mossy throne.
Waves broke, jumping higher,
Chuckled, foaming back to the sea.
The seagulls sang for her.

An endless horizon gleamed,
While the sea kissed its shore.
Salt air swirled through each of my lungs,
And promised I was more.

Chasing the Moon

By Katie Zagzoug

The moon is so huge tonight it looks like it might fall on us. But I know it won't, because gravity exists, so it's okay.

"Gus, ten more minutes." I hear the echo of my mother's voice in my head, knowing we'll be out well over her limit—we always are. I kick my feet against the pavement and glance up at my brother. He stands a good foot above me, with light hair and gray eyes that remind me of my father.

"You ready, Parker?" He bounces up and down on his toes impatiently.

"Yesplease, Gus, yesplease." I nod and hide my smile from him.

"On your mark..." Parker leans forward, flapping his massive hand against his thigh. "Get set..." He breathes in deep, two rows of crooked white teeth stretching across his face in a grin. "GO!" I push off the asphalt and spring through the air with my brother at my side. We're neck and neck but we aren't focusing on each other because we're only set on one thing: the moon.

You kids will be the ones to get it, I know you will. Dad was certain Park and I would be the ones to catch the moon. You'll be the richest men in all of Indiana. We would laugh and ask him how the moon would get us any money at all. Think of all the cash you'll make as cheese salesmen!

"The moon isn't really made out of cheese, Dad," I'd say, and Parker would laugh.

Looking at him now, my brother, with his hair flying backwards and his tongue hanging out, it really makes me think of Dad. It reminds me of when he was out here with us, chasing the moon. Running fast, but not faster than us because he wanted us to believe we were the fastest kids in the whole universe. It makes me miss him.

At the end of the street where the last fire hydrant is, we stop and lean on our knees. I breathe in and out slowly, then turn to my brother, who's staring into the sky.

"I swear I almost got it that time, Gus. Iswear, Iswear."

I pat his back, leading him to the steps. "You'll get it next time, man." We sit down and I watch Parker closely as he picks grass from the lawn, presses it between his thumbs and shreds each blade into tiny pieces. He mumbles to himself about the moon and how proud Dad would be and how he's suuresure he'll get the moon tomorrow.

I lay back and balance my head in my hands, looking up at the moon. I see my father in the moon just as much as I see him in Parker, my mother, our house and everything else. I miss him and I swear that as long as I do, I will never stop chasing the moon.
